Director and Writer: Danny Boyle, Screenplay: John Hodge, Cinematographer: Danny Boyle. Danny Boyle is a British director, writer and producer. Born in Kilburn, London, Boyle is one of the most recognized filmmakers of the British New Wave movement. In addition to his own films, Boyle has written, produced, and directed several other acclaimed films, including Trainspotting (1996), The Beach (2000), A Life Less Ordinary (1997), Slumdog Millionaire (2008), 28 Days Later (2002), and The Brothers Bloom (2009). His 2004 film, Shallow Grave, received the British Independent Film Award for Best British Independent Film and the John Cassavetes Award at the 2004 Venice Film Festival. Boyle has also directed the music video for The Streets' "I Don't Wanna Dance", "A Life Less Ordinary", "C'mon Everybody" and "I Will Follow". He also wrote the screenplay for the films Trainspotting and A Life Less Ordinary. As a producer, Boyle has been responsible for such films as The Cook, the Thief, His Wife & Her Lover, The Beach, The Last King of Scotland, 28 Days Later, A Life Less Ordinary, and, most recently, Trance. He is the only director to win the BAFTA for Best Director and the Academy Award for Best Director for two different films. He also won the BAFTA for Best Screenplay for Trainspotting and the Academy Award for Best Adapted Screenplay for A Life Less Ordinary. He also received a nomination for the Academy Award for Best Original Screenplay for Slumdog Millionaire.Cambodia's newly elected Prime Minister, Hun Sen, will launch a multi-billion dollar tourism development project on the resort island of Koh Tao, the first step in his long-awaited pledge to bring back tourists to the country. The project will be based on the island's "snow white" reputation and its links to the "Phnom Penh" (Royal Palace) family, Hun Sen's official website said. "It will be the largest and most successful investment project in the country in the last 50 years," the website said. 82157476af
